

Feeding Houses And Birdbaths In Your Garden Making Your Feathered Friends

Having a garden filled with lush greenery and beautiful flowers is always a delight. But have you ever thought about inviting some feathered friends to your garden as well? Creating a welcoming space for birds not only adds vibrancy but also provides a safe haven for them. Feeding houses and birdbaths are two essential elements that can make your garden a haven for our avian companions.

Why Should You Attract Birds to Your Garden?

Birds play an integral role in maintaining the ecological balance of our ecosystem. They help with pollination and seed dispersal, control pests, and even act as natural insecticides by eating harmful insects. By attracting birds to your garden, you create a natural pest control system that reduces the need for harmful chemicals.

Additionally, watching birds in your garden can bring immense joy and tranquility. Their melodious chirping and mesmerizing flights can create a sense of harmony and calmness. Bird-watching is also a great way to connect with nature and learn about different bird species.

Feeding Houses: A Welcoming Space for Birds

Feeding houses, also known as bird feeders, are specially designed structures that provide birds with a reliable source of food. These houses usually have small openings where bird food, such as seeds or suet, can be placed. By having a feeding house in your garden, you can attract a variety of bird species, including finches, sparrows, and chickadees.

When choosing a feeding house, consider the following factors:

- Size: Select a feeding house appropriate for the bird species you wish to attract. Different birds have different feeding preferences, so having a variety of feeder sizes can accommodate diverse species.
- Location: Place the feeding house in an open area of your garden, away from potential threats like cats or squirrels. Ensure it is easily accessible for birds but not too close to windows to prevent collisions.
- Maintenance: Regularly clean and refill the feeder to keep it hygienic and ensure a steady food supply. This will encourage more birds to visit your garden.

Birdbaths: A Refreshing Oasis for Birds

Birds need access to water for drinking and grooming, making birdbaths an essential addition to any bird-friendly garden. Birdbaths can range from simple shallow dishes to elaborate decorative structures. Furthermore, the sound of water can attract birds even from a distance.

Consider the following when installing a birdbath:

- Placement: Place the birdbath in a shaded area to prevent the water from evaporating quickly. Make sure it is easily visible and does not have any obstacles that could deter birds from approaching.
- Depth: The water depth should be shallow enough for birds to comfortably bathe in without posing a drowning risk. Adding a few small stones or branches as perches can assist smaller birds in feeling secure.
- Cleanliness: Regularly clean the birdbath and change the water every few days to prevent the growth of harmful bacteria. This ensures a hygienic water source for birds.

When I was a child I remember reading a bird book about a little boy named Robin who was recuperating in the home of his uncle. He had absolutely no interest in life because he had just recovered from an accident which left him immobile. His uncle who was a very sensible sort of adult decided that his nephew could only get an interest in life if he began to make friends with his feathered friends outside his window and that could only be done when he made a feeding house for the birds on the windowsill outside Robin's bedroom.

The feeding house in the winter and the birdbath in the summer – can you imagine something giving more pleasure and adding a sense of activity to an otherwise quiet scene? The moment we are going to set up our feeding house, where we can best observe the birds flying to and from it, especially during the winter, from our bedroom or from our living room window, naturally we know that here is something which is going to give us endless hours of pleasure, especially on those long dreary winter days when we are cabin bound.

In the same manner, we are going to place the birdbath in the best site and position where we can see it best from our summer seat out in the open, under our favorite trees. Believe it or not, but the really social, even though we think plenty of them are scared or shy of humans. The moment they get to know that this particular human is rather safe to be around, they are going to come closer to us, provided we are careful not to scare them. This includes making abrupt movements or making any sort of noise while they are eating.
