Throughout her formative years, Joanne was an avid reader and a keen observer of the world around her. She found solace in books and used them as a means to expand her knowledge and understanding of the world. This thirst for knowledge fueled her desire to explore unconventional career paths and break free from traditional expectations.

As Joanne reached her teenage years, she became acutely aware of the limitations placed on women in society. The prevailing gender roles, ingrained from a young age, had seemingly predetermined her destiny. But Joanne refused to subscribe to these limiting beliefs and instead decided to create her own path.

Building a Foundation of Excellence

With a fierce determination to prove the world wrong, Joanne focused her energies on excelling academically. She poured countless hours into her studies, often sacrificing social outings and leisure activities. While her peers questioned her choices, Joanne knew that she was building the foundation for her future success.

Instead, she saw them as stepping stones towards her ultimate triumph. Joanne believed that every defeat only fueled her determination to succeed.

Joanne's persistence and resilience began to bear fruit when she was offered an internship at a prestigious company known for its male-dominated workforce. Undeterred by the male-dominated culture, Joanne proved herself to be an invaluable asset to the organization, breaking down stereotypes with every task she completed.

A Vision Beyond the Ordinary

As Joanne's career progressed, she realized that her journey was not just about her individual success but also about empowering future generations of women. She recognized the need to create a support system and a platform where women could share their experiences and rise together.

Joanne Phillips' ordeal began aged 13 when she was gang-raped in her bedroom by local boys. Following the trauma, she dropped out of school, was befriended by an older man and was forced into prostitution aged 16.

Over the next six years, she was raped by over 500 men, starved, beaten, and transported around the country to brothels. Forced to have sex with men from all walks of life including lawyers, stockbrokers, doctors, a parish councillor, Joanne was even made to have sex with her former school headteacher – who didn't recognise her.

Every attempt to flee failed. Police warned her mother and stepdad she had chosen the lifestyle and even threatened to charge her parents with living off immoral earnings if they allowed her to move back. Escape seemed impossible, until one day she couldn't take any more.

Just before her 21st birthday, Joanne eventually escaped her enslavement. After being left alone briefly in a London flat, where she was expected to work, she took a chance after finding a bag of money and a handgun. Fearing for her life, she fled into the night with nothing but a plastic bag of cash. After catching a train to Northern Ireland, she found her real dad and hid at his home from her pimp.

Desperate to readjust to normal life, she found a job and went on to study at university. But when she tried to explain to a new boyfriend about her past, he didn't believe any of it was true, so she vowed to keep the abuse a secret – until years later, a conversation with one of her own teenage daughters changed her life..
