Victorian Secrets

Victorian Fashion Facts Unveiled Craze for Corsets, Hoop skirts and Bustles

Fashion of the Victorian period created an often exaggerated and ostentatious look. Tight corsets, gigantic hoop-skirts, and outrageous bustles make today's fashion trends look sedate by comparison. Clothing styles and stylish garments were a sign of respectability.

Early Victorian Fashion:

The year 1838 saw a new change from the Romantic style of dresses. Large sleeves suddenly slimmed and a seam line dropped the shoulder of dresses. So evening gowns were sleeveless and low-necked and were worn with long over the elbow or shoulder length gloves.

Women started to wear dresses, of which many costumes were actually a separate bodice and skirt. Skirts were draped and tied in different ways and wore over a same color or contrasting underskirt. Bodices were very tight fitted to create the impression of a very narrow and long neckline or torso.

The Victorian Fashion Period:

The Victorian period was the time between 1837 and the 1890's and is named after Britain's Queen Victoria. Women of the era were not independent, they first lived under the protection of their fathers in childhood, then under their husbands in adulthood and finally under their sons during old age. A woman's intelligence was restricted to social events. That time teaching opportunities were limited.

The Industrial Revolution at that time created new wealth for masters, industrialists, and introduced a new middle class who was proud of their status. Women started to flaunt their fashion sense first in hoop skirts and then in the more outrageous and elaborate bustle dresses.

The Sewing Machine and Victorian Technology:

In 1850 with the introduction of sewing machine along with the start of the synthetic dyes brought a revolution in the fashion world. This followed by other developments like sized paper patterns and slicing machines made fashion and clothing easily available to all.

It was in 1850, that with the help of the above mentioned technology, the Paris fashion designer Charles Worth introduced a new line of clothing known as Haute Couture (High Fashion) which is popular even in today in various new avatars of the contemporary party wear gowns. High fashion is characterized by heavy flares and ornamentation.

Rise of the Fashion Plate:

Rise of the fashion plate period 1880 brought back the trend of the full and curvy silhouette replacing the long and slender fashion look of the 1870s. Small waistline was highlighted with wide-shoulders and full bust supported with corsets and a curvy and protruding bum.

The hottest trend of the time was of the fashion plate, a skirt tied in a special manner to create fullness over the bottom and wore over a long jacket-like fitted bodice called basque. These fashion plate and basques formed in a popular day wear item.

Introduction of the Bustle in 1888:

However, by the late 1880's a new fashion style came into being, known as the Bustle. This fashion trend emphasized on the woman's posterior. Bustles were actually large rectangular or crescent shaped made from horse hair or wavy wire mesh to draw attention to a woman's rear. These were held on to the woman's attire with a buckled waist band and gave a very fashionable look to the wearer.
