Dear Mr Wheatley.

Thank you for your letter.
It is most kind of you to write to me.
I enclose my modest contribution to the Borley mystery.
So much had been written about Borley that I felt something should be said about the Church - village as well as the hauntings.
So much has happened since that I am now endeavouring to write a much enlarged edition of the book.
I do not know if any publisher is likely to accept it.

The Cryptic Contents

The contents of the letter were nothing short of cryptic. Written in an ancient language unknown to contemporary scholars, it seemed as if Henning had meticulously crafted his message in a bid to conceal vital information from prying eyes.

The letter spoke of a mythical artifact, rumored to possess divine powers, and hinted at a treacherous journey that would lead the worthy seeker to its hiding place.
