In this immigrant story written in dance-theater form, Karine moves from Haiti to the US with hopes of a better future for herself and for her daughter, and with hopes of leaving behind the pain and loss that have characterized her life so far. As a dance teacher, she quickly assimilates to the local ethnic dance scene in the SF Bay Area. She meets Tania, an African American woman who teaches Haitian dance classes, and Raoul, also a Haitian immigrant, who makes a living providing dance classes with live music. Though she encounters conflict in her new home, she is guided on her path by the love she has for her daughter, and by the cultural and historical knowledge she brings with her from Haiti. However, some existential questions arise which make her reconsider her decision to stay in the US.
